

FOREWORD

ANDREW LOWRY
PRESIDENT

I CONSIDER it a great privilege, indeed, to have the opportunity of contributing a brief foreword to the first number of the Donegal Historical Society Journal. I may say that this Society, with its associated Journal and proposed Repository, bid fair to fulfil a hope I have entertained for quite a long time.

May I take this opportunity of asking the co-operation and support of everyone who can help, and so strengthen the hands of our energetic Secretary and Editor, to make the entire project worthy of our grand old County, which offers so much interest to all of us—quite irrespective of creed, class, political affinities or racial backgrounds.

Let us all help in creating a viewpoint—
“Whence in far visions of the Past we see
Dim forces moulding what we yet will be.”
